The because of things
Haunts the hungry child Macaroni does no good
Not even with cheese

It seems as if everything Is there just as a puzzle Something he has to solve He and only he

Nobody tells him
Anything, nobody helps.
He reaches out to try
With his hands

His very soft hands.

Always waiting to be missed a girl in the high country remembers a book she read seemed to be all about her but how could that be,

the writer long dead and she just out of school and yet—she looked up at the sky over the Medicine Bow range, the sky is close here,
she thought the sky
is always there, the sky must have told him so this morning long ago.

NYAMs

How long it takes to lose the least thought if all you want
is nectar pouring down into you from some beautiful place you also are.

2.

But easy it is
if nothing is done
and you do less

letting the heavy
settle and the light
just blow away.

3.

To skate still on the edge moveless between clarity and sleep
as if you were another
catch yourself watching and then let go?

4.

It is like this

all the time

people walking

as if through trees

they know

where they're bound

no need to follow.
