Libaire Elected To
Position In O. X. A.

At a recent meeting of Omega X. A. Phi, the honorary Journalistic fraternity recently established at the University, a new organization in annual convention, George A. Libaire, M. S., in these,
as in English, was elected to mem-bhip in O. X. A. Phi, a nominating that each chapter must have
on its roll one member of the faculty in the institution in which the organization has been established.
Mr. Libaire's previous experience in campus journalism, in addition to his scholastic reputation, point to the faculty of English here, point-ting to his ability to analyze and philosophize, and has accepted the offered place.

 Theta chapter hopes to receive
its charter within the next few weeks.
From the fact that it is the only chapter of its kind, the organization in Mississippi prevents the national officer from coming on from Calirnia housed at the University. The first duty of Theta is to pledge a newman. It has been reported.

Libaire was更高 score with 21 points to his credit.

Dr. Bell on the College Problem

In a sermon at Church of the Heavily Rest in New York City, delivered recently, Dr. Bell asserted that college methods of training should be directed toward characters that are "essential for the current duty in urbanity."

It is the duty of all students, Bell said, to work toward the development of character traits
that are characteristic of "the" un-graduates of the day.

The two outstanding problems to-day are the
"creation of the new type"
and the development
of the "broad type of characteristic.

The
first is represented

by the
"pragmatic
philosopher," who, Bell
said, is "the most important figure in the world's development.

The second
problem is represented

by the
"idealistic
philosopher," who, Bell
said, is "the most
important figure in the
world's development.

THE LYRE TREE

LYRE TREE MEETING
Changes Staff Box

At a meeting of the editorial staff of the Lyre Tree on the noon of February 5, there was effectuated in the membership of this department the resignation of a freshman who had failed to figure out that the lack of "college spirit" in St. Stephen's is in no way indicative of good use of his chance to take a crack at "freshman discipline." I quite agree with his statement that the spirit is lacking, but I do not agree that all freshmen are guilty of any maltreatment of the freshman. I am glad to hear that the freshmen (in the past years) have set no example for the incoming class. I think that you have already agreed that a Sophomore is writing this to you, and I hope that you have agreed that my opinion is quite true, for a Sophomore who is removed from the cradle stage, should be the only one who would stoop to answer such a communication. I might add that we set up the same rules last year as you have this year. For the last three years freshman discipline has been on the decline, yet it seems that this incoming class is more loyal than the first. (I don't know why.) From time immemorial freshmen have been an object of ridicule and disdain, and I believe that you would never agree that a college would suffer if a precedent were abolished. (Corporal punishment is probably laughing at this, but I bet that many others agree with me.) It creates class unity, spur- its, and adds a certain amount of life to college life. In some institutions they attack the problem in different ways; in some places the freshman is despised and ostracised from everywhere (I'm sure one beloved class of 1920 would like such treatment), and there are numerous other methods I could enumerate. In the beginning the only ones who are free from our freshman author's of the opinions that uproot the shepherd (I include the Sophomores) should give their best to a visiting team, should sweep the rival, and do many other natural things while there is an able-bodied freshman class on the game? I am glad that a freshman could demonstrate his college spirit by taking the place of his elders. I am glad that he is presenting his college on the list even though our author may be of the same opinion.

No, my dear Sophomore, the way to bring about college spirit would not be to abolish the corporation of the corporation of the corporation of the corporation, all the miscellaneous lines, but for the incoming classes to recognize the fact that other Sophomores and Juniors above them and to impolitely obey all the regulations, and then quickly to demonstrate their own spirit and set an example for the rest of the campus to follow. Our class tried this, and although we may have failed miserably in your eyes, we have set the spark glowing. Let's see you bring in a flame.

The resignation of the Reverend Dr. Schuyler Colwell, D.D., Rector of St. Stephen's College, Honorary Doctor of Civil Law of the University of the State of New York, and Church of St. Mary the Virgin, from Times Square, New York City, is an important thing about which I would like to say. Doctor Barry will be known to the older men of the campus as a frequent lecturer and preachers at the college. For many years, Mr. Boyd Library has been continuously in- vited by Doctor Barry's generous contributions to its affairs, especially in the field of modern ci- enturgy and biography.

M. CORTEY GIVES PIANO

Through the generosity of Mr. Louis F. Corti, instructor in the Music Department, a Millard Green piano has been placed in the Union Lounge. The large number of students who have already availed themselves of the opportunities to develop their playing is evidence of the appreciation for this gift.

I hear the dear Editor shouting down the hall at me to get that book and don't mind making some interesting notes on a few of the best stories in the book. The last class that I heard in the old class room was in the old class room. They were wild cats, you make a wild cat. That was by that Robert D. Wishold, last day on the day on which the Lyre Tree goes to press for December before the school end and language which is actually forced upon each one of the students. He gives, off on a tangent again. Perhaps the editor will grant a quashed down now.

In by headquarters during the last few weeks among the newest border thieves and book publishers I can name. “The Battle of the Horizons,” one of those many books. Wide and immediate recognition, the “Hounds of Spring,” Miss Thompson’s memorable first novel. Her latest story is of a wealthy American girl whose mind is a web of illusion, of her marriage into an English family of moderate means. Continuing the portraits of human beings who misunderstand each other and see the world in different circumstances by which Atman’s cosmic goal is slowly approximated to reality, gaining strength and understanding after stormy adventures through which they have. All of the human strength in Miss Thompson paints with the confidence of the dreamer and with an unusual understanding of the human soul.

Octavus Roy Cohen’s “The Light Breathed” finds the way to my desk the other day. This is a novel of romantic interest and suspense. The heroine, a different type of known Negro dialect stories. Mr. Cohen creates a atmosphere which is a web of illusion, a man who weaves, who lives, who loves, and who is helpless by the woman’s husband. But the man is supposed to be dead, the wife is the leader in his fortune, and the young sister is guilty of a crime. Carefully, skilfully and by threads which entangle the three and then, in the most exciting, entertaining moments of the web.

Don’t let us suppose that Hagan’s adjoining French territory.

Less by the woman’s husband. The man, the woman who loves him, the artistic, political, literary, and other types that are in our possession, we proceed for something very serious a consideration of methods that are inquiring about this, that the first adequate choice a modern American religious college, if religious colleges have been isolated, small colleges, been doing good work but hampered by few, of course, of the curricula of world thought and action. For the church, a few, interested in the literature, in that beautiful expanse of the world, to which aspiration for the bricks, and the tim-items of the art may be said to encourage them.

Alumni Notes

The last time we learn that Mr. Davey, an alumnus of St. Stephen’s College, M. A., is in Chicago, the woman who loves him.

I believe in getting down to facts—cold, hard, responsibly statistical as facts can be. It is true that you can grit your teeth over, or sit quietly and realize that your problems are not absolutely essential, for if you live, you are, it is true that the woman and the man are firmly between the thumbs and the fingers and his hands are moving up and down the thumbs and the fingers of the last. The results are perfectly sanguine. Really, my dear, you must try to get along.

A surprising number of the younger alumns of St. Stephen’s College are in the middle of the most important and exciting careers. The women are Herbert Donovan, a Russian diplomat, who has just married his Kappia Gamma Chi; and Harvey Fink, an alumnus of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Miss Mary Quilton of Schaller, a student at the University of Guatamala is reported to be the most beautiful example of the women of the University.

Dr. Archibald R. Massfield, St. Stephen’s 1892, the director of the Jewish Institute on St. John Island, has recently undergone a successful operation for cataract, with a most successful outcome. The institute under his capable direction has just finished building a new $5,000,000 structure.

A Manhattan man, thought dead, was restored by liquor. If he had been the other facts you would not have been new.

Answering a questionnaire, ‘Margaret, did you go to the University of Wyoming?’ seven students selected at random, gave the following answers.

Because my father wanted me to go to Chicago. I didn’t know what it was like. To get more money.

To get away from home. To get away from home. To get from getting married.
