Dear Participants,

first of all I wish to thank you for your contribution in making the Marx Conference a successful event.

I must now go forward to the editing of the two-volumes proceedings for Macmillan. I have slightly changed my time-schedule, and procedures. As you know, I have a quantitative word constraint; and it is also important to set a high qualitative level for the papers. If most of you stay near the 5.000 words, it is likely that the quantitative constraint will be not so binding - i.e. almost the totality of the papers submitted could be published. Thus, what I wish now to stress is the qualitative constraint.

To reduce the arbitrariness in my choices on the papers to publish, and to improve their quality, I have decided to ask you to subject your papers to a process of (anonymous) refereeing. The (one or two) referees (for each paper) will be chosen by me among the participants to the conference. I shall then let you know of the comments on your paper, wait for a final version to submit again to the referees, and eventually take a final decision.

To start this procedure, I need that for the end of january you either confirm that you wish to subject your paper in the form presented at the conference or send me a different draft. Then the time-schedule will be the following:

- end of february: reply of the referees
- end of march: last draft of the paper
- mid-april: second reply of the referees
- end of april: final decision

I am also thinking to add discussants (chosen among the participants) also for the papers originally included in the workshop. This could be done between april and the end of may.

I thank you again for your patience and help, and look forward to hearing from you.

Best wishes (and, by the way, happy new year!)
