Spring 2014

Requiem: All That's Left is Noise

Danielle R. Dobkin
Bard College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.bard.edu/senproj_s2014

Part of the Composition Commons, Music Performance Commons, Music Therapy Commons, and the Other Music Commons

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 3.0 License.

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.bard.edu/senproj_s2014/23

This Open Access work is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been provided to you by Bard College's Stevenson Library with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this work in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/or on the work itself. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@bard.edu.
A Requiem:

All That’s Left is Noise

Senior Project submitted to

The Division of the Arts

of Bard College

By

Danielle R Dobkin

Annandale-On-Hudson, New York

May 2014
Danielle R. Dobkin
Artist Statement
May 2014
Requiem: All That’s Left if Noise

Requiem: All That’s Left is Noise is a personal interpretation of the traditional Latin liturgy of the Western Church’s Requiem Mass- a composition meant to be the carrier for the soul, on it’s journey to paradise. The requiem is comprised of 7 movements: Introit, Kyrie (Lord have Mercy), Dies Irae (Day of Wrath), Lycrimosa (Day of Weeping), Sanctus (Holy, Holy, Holy), Lux Aeterna (Eternal Light), and the Libera Me (Deliver Me). These seven movements sonically replicate the range of human emotion, ending on the soul’s delivery in paradise. In order to get to paradise you must first go through the inferno. Requiem: All That’s Left is Noise is for electronics, voice and a small ensemble.

I wanted to create a piece of monumental status, a sonic experience that was a combination of all the things I have learned over the past 4 years. The requiem incorporates psychoacoustic elements, composition as well as sound design.

It wasn’t until this year that I thought of myself of a composer. I thought of myself as a sound sculpture, creating intimate sounds with tightly tuned details that you could get lost in. These patches turned into soundscapes, the soundscapes morphed into compositions. Composition for me turned into a combination of loop based patterns in odd meters mixed with evolving sounds that lead from section to section. In experimenting with composition, soundscapes, and loops I also discovered drone music. I found drone music as a medium in which I could easily express my ideas.
In this project I spent a lot of time developing a deep interpretation of the text. From all the Requiems I have listened to, every composer has a slightly different take on what the text is communicating. For example, looking at the Kyrie (Lord have mercy, Christ have mercy) some composers turned this movement into a plea, others, a demand. The Requiem also has a certain atmosphere that encompasses it. I like things that surround you, take over, swallow you whole and spit you back out - this I believe is very present in my work. This may also be why I like a large speaker set up.

The performance aspect of the requiem has been just as important as the composition itself. We’ve put together a 10.1 speaker set up. Through Ableton I have the opportunity to send sound to wherever I find them to be most theatrically appropriate.

Speaking of theatrics, Verdi had a huge influential role in my requiem. We had perfect timing this semester, in Chamber Singers we learned and preformed the Verdi Requiem. He brought about a theatrical absurdity to his requiem that made it close to, if not, operatic. Like myself, Verdi was a secular composer creating a very sacred piece of music.

Ligeti also had a great influence on my Requiem. Unlike the composers of the classical and baroque fashion, Ligeti’s requiem raises the question to me, “well, what happens if you’re not going to heaven”. His perverse and stomach clenching requiem was the invitation I needed create my own.

The title of my project, A Requiem: All That’s Left is Noise has an inner meaning. Of course, death has been a topic of conversation this semester. I’ve learned to understand life as a looped based, continuous structure. Life will always continue in some form or another. Noise is a combination of all the frequencies in the spectrum combined. Everything is put together however you cannot pinpoint a single tone. Saying “all that is left is noise” means to me that nothing and everything are coexisting together.