

2-2003

febC2003

Robert Kelly
Bard College

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts

Recommended Citation

Kelly, Robert, "febC2003" (2003). Robert Kelly Manuscripts. Paper 888. http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts/888

This Manuscript is brought to you for free and open access by the Robert Kelly Archive at Bard Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Robert Kelly Manuscripts by an authorized administrator of Bard Digital Commons. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@bard.edu.

But I held the hook of this deception big fish yanked from the sea and the boat hardly noticed.

The sea groaned, though, and in that hour I knew a strange thing that stayed with me when I came to land

That all these quiet people streets and streets full of their orderly enterprise or rowdy songs or old man goofiness all these people were conceived in ecstasy and orgasm and bliss not one that did not come from such coming.

And all that starburst energy turns to this.
I brought the fish to my grandmother's house and laid it on her table

I too have a right to be here I reasoned, and no one spoke.
Silence is the only weapon wisdom has against intelligence.

I knew something but the world would not let the knowing of it do me any good.

9 February 2003

CARVE THIS ON A STONE:

sometimes a word's so heavy you can't lift it

9 II 03

WHY I AM A BABYLONIAN

I write in clay. I take my finger that has touched you a finger that has pointed to the sun and stroked a cat's back, a finger that has stirred the sacramental wine and patted the tip of your sacred nose, this finger drags some language into clay, word by word gouging them in.

The clay dries, and if days or weeks later I still like what the mud let me say I'll have the tablet baked, and there it will sit safe on a shelf until the world dissolves you can break the tablet but you can't break the text, the word and the writing and what it's written on all one substance, no separation, no ink to make difference, no untouched void.

9 February 2003

Is it about to snow or did it just finish we adjust ourselves to the length of things one way or the other taking in as much as we can to be free of what we need a kind of mercy not to know how far we stretch deep snow in the woods a sea gull crying.

10 February 2003

I look down at the banister and see my father's hand gripping the rail the funny way he had almost double-jointed the hand folding on itself like a sail furled and the ship slips into harbor his hand at the end of my arm and how is that we don't look anything alike maybe the eyes are similar maybe the eyes they tell me are green are far away his were, his are, my arm comes to term with his hand and there it is, I am holding onto the banister of the staircase in my own house, the wooden hill to Bedfordshire, the wooden mountain to the Land of Nod, my house I think of it, my hand, but it's his hand I see on the wooden rail

10 February 2003

A HOUSE

A house has so many ways to say. A house to happen.
It is a place under all to happen in. Open one door and there's the sea.
Another and a horse comes in.
A house. A house is the balance of the mind, see-saw, a house is a son is a daughter. A house needs you to know. Everything is construction.

If it isn't construction it isn't feeling.
You can't feel if you don't build.

If you teach anything teach construction so the soul has a house to fill with its inquiries, its rock samples, boy friends, sound effects, snapshots, secret residues of love. A house has stains.

A house hides stains.

I would teach you to build houses if I knew. Failing that, this is all about failing, falling back on language to decide, decode,

I can tell you when a house is built by walking in. The door, the floor, the window, the separation from the other, the outer, and then the roof. What is a roof?

Who am I to tell you where to live?
Yet I must have some place to find you in.
You have to be under something for me to get there so I can tell you what it feels like to walk through your door into your animal vegetable mineral space — every house is just a cellar of the sky.

A house hurries.

A house hides.

Symphonia Domestica — Strauss wrote a long music to show how a house sounds all day long, a house is time held in your hand, a house is space always running out of room.

Every art is a way of living in a place.
Some place it makes.

I want art to feel housely so there is always room for me.

And the easiest door has mystery hinges, a question enters, enters itself, as you do, reading.

All the things we say along the way are nomad things, along the way to what, a house moves, do you know that?

enough answers, now for some questions I want to come visit you where you live so I must know that I'm counting on your house to tell me make up a place for us to be as if it were your house and it will be your house complete with orange juice and dust you look up and see me in the door frame looking my way in, and one of us asks

Did I say something or are you just listening?

10 February 2003

ONE SUN, RISING

Palpable in cloud, your fingers feeling it through the atmosphere, a grey world with molten silver in it.
Metal of the day.
Moonsilver. Wear white, wear pearls.
A day of self-conscious underwear.

You need the insides of things, no blame.

 If I told you all this you'd think I meant something else something more.

 Maybe you're right.

Time plays with us like children making up imaginary countries and drawing flags for them on pieces of paper with authentic crayolas that fall and get ground into the carpet.
I am the color red-violet. You are the clock.

10 February 2003

THE CONFESSION

Be ready to forgive me for all I forget.

Be red. To give me four and let me keep three, or just this one and those two, the shining ones, over the rooftop calling me, that set of well they aren't exactly twins.

Ma foi! they used to say (mild expletive) or (holding his side after a meal bigger than elegant) mon foie!
Right side, near the door.

We examined the toilet seat, the curious framework those people used to hold something not clear in position between the collar and the water so to say. We were going traveling yet again. Some year let's stay home even in dreams. So the three are ok, by you, for me, to keep, ok?

Number is a color too, a commodious burgundy, and names now that you mention it are very like flags — you say a word and I hear troops massing across the border, dusky zouaves or whiskery uhlans, and elks trotting through the snow away from mankind as we used to call the human moiety, the anxious minority, life on earth.

So now I just have to figure out their names.
Or remember them, naming is just remembering Plato or one of his sidemen observed.
No they didn't, it was you yourself, in this life, probably wearing the same nice blue shirt dreaming of royal palms and Malibu and revolt.
But revolutions always speaks foreign languages, you can't get there in English, something about the aspects of the verb, the overwhelming of nouns by antecedent adjectives, above all the way the "the" is monarchist, patriarch and absolute, the book as if there could be only one.
So dream on, red man, you're not even hemidemisemi-Cherokee, you can't speak French, you're me.

11 February 2003

WORDSWORTH

It would be a satisfaction both aesthetic and moral for it to become widely known that the sitting president of the College of Pataphysics in France is in fact the lineal descendant of the illegitimate (as the thing was described in those days) or more politely said natural child of the not yet famous English poet — from rebel to laureate in one lifetime — William Wordsworth, the child conceived in 17--, fruit of an ardent but hasty flourish of sonnets between the wandering revolutionary and a trusting girl in Normandy.

11 February 2003

GENETICS

The best thing that can be hoped for sexual propagation is that running water purifies itself my father said.
And if you take yourself seriously long enough you wind up strangely respecting everybody else. It isn't always easy to fit such tacit sentiments into the pataphysical project but genetics makes monsters of us all.
I for example have green eyes and bushy brows, features observed with suspicion when I travel in what used to be called the Orient. But now we don't have names for anything anymore.

11 February 2003

JUST DESSERT

Taste as much of it as you can because there are servants listening below the stones. They want to help us if we let them but sometimes the price is terrible: to be respected when we don't respect ourselves.

We can call this Chicago eventually it is an old disease as America goes this doubt that blinds foreknowledge because from the beginning of my moment I knew I would avail it would be right, long and hard, but right I would be the accurate thing a reverent answer to the world this work I'd come to do that made me be.

11 February 2003

IT HAS TO BE SOMETHING

it has to be something late, a Valentine a little early, a heart happening all the time call this a blue inscription on a red island found by amateur archeologists fooling around in a cave call this the witch's well from which you hand out fire and give it to me thinking so far away from the mind.

12 February 2003

PORTENTS

Break the sky into six pieces and feed them to bees.
Birds are born. Decide by listening to their chirping which way the wind wants to blow.

Go with it, I would say, except I don't like to issue commands any more than you like to receive them.
Like. Like is a lake where scientists drown swimming across to the island of explanation. That's why I beg you never to explain, take the train, dress simply and always hold something in your hand.
It can be a star or a garden hose.
We have to hurry. Any minute the surgeon will be ready.

12 February 2003

PROM

All right let there be music I concede the point to the presumptuous ocean you have dragged your carcass also to this promontory beholding something we seem to be when something Grecker is tantalizing near so I permit the folkish to come over the music a dream we can't wake up from over the intellectual esplanade along the river of change, behold that hankering for regularity the fucking smooth that did our mothers in.

The thought of how far we have come turns me to stone inside you.

13 February 2003

INSTRUCTIONS:

Against the natural cheese of feeling out of even screws and bolts and Q-tips rig a different animal together to stand here brave as daylight and feel nothing at all.

13 February 2003

To wake up wanting you insults us both.

13 II 03

APOCALYPSE

Music is in fact made of intervals and silences, can't I have that a mechanical Rabbi ripping down the holy tent to show the common stars?

13 February 2003

SNOW

Snow, two months of it have changed the contours of the ground closer to me now white earth rises towards my windows overnight hills and a mountain plowed and bare trees hide nothing but what I'm thinking.

Contour is meaning, I know whoever I know from the slopes the yieldings, the things that reach towards me, now even the ground in my backyard comes at me and all the trees are strangers.

13 February 2003

[end of Notebook 253]

A VALENTINE FOR CHARLOTTE

The time to say this is now before all the novels and epics get themselves written somehow athwart us, our hands, our long translations of a lost original, all this means you, we are together like consonants and vowels in one word inextricable the way the meaning of a poem gets lost in, survives at the same time in another language till it is all we have and more than complete the way this moment is, hereish and nowish hence always.

14 February 2003

Pour ma Colette

L'oiseau a eu peur de souhaiter un cœur plus grand que le sien

—ton cœur par exemple plus vrai que le monde—mais enfin il chante ses vœux.

Je t'aime, je t'aime toujours

