

1-2018

jan2018

Robert Kelly

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk\_manuscripts

---

=====

Walking under the wing the Beethoven the million revelers in fur hats
the endless midnights the joy that comes to remember us, the change in the weather, quiet subwats, the river
roaring calmly past
under the ice, the actual.

We are so close to the beginning again, a cloak around your shoulders, smile for the camera
so hard for me to smile
I am permanently happy so this glum face of mine is my smile all the time so I delight in the tumult, New Years, ative city,

what nice people Americans really are, innocent, trusting, kindly, ready to kiss and be happy, a land of why not and let's try it, a land of sure, sharing not so much but eagles overhead, fireworks from China like everything else, wolf fur on your collar bow wow don't make me laugh it is all starting up again and we are newborn as can be,

naked in our smug clothes,
I mean snug, nice people, prompt to forgive, quicker to forget, I love you too, and yes we will all be siblings, lovers fiddling with locks, nice people, maybe even me.

1 January 2018

=====

Blue remembers us.
I don't know what else
it knows how to do, the sky. We have been in war and forgotten much in the depravity of capital.
Winter comes along to show sheer cold beauty it bids us understand. Outside and inside the same, the left hand quiet in the lap.

1 January 2018

A NEW YEAR

It's only risky
if you see it as different from the old.
It's all the same,
it's you all over again,
you the victim, the promised one,
the only hope, the recuer.

1 January 2018

=====

But all the important things haven't been said,
tea to dunk cookies in.
the cyclotron, that asteroid, organic kale. No, wait, just the moon in my hands.

1 January 2018

=====

If I knew how to be closer
I would wake.
Get up, go outside where it all according to legend
is waiting always.
And there you'd be silent as a scarecrow
sumptuous as Saturdays.
But I wouldn't know your name again, so the sun would whisper it to me.

1 January 2018

=====

We live in numbers.
Dangerous. Numbers
accumulate, numbers kill.

Forget them. Don't count.
When is not important.
Rome just fell, we still speak English, sort of,
I have barely been born even now. Wait your turn, i'm almost finished.
Or am I you already and I am done?

1 January 2018

=====

The overture is longer than the opera.
It has to be —
it has to do all the work when there;s so little to say or sing.

Open the door —
all the rest is anti-climax, late afternnon, dusty cactus, your old aunt's living room.

1 January 2018

THREE SAD AVOWALS

Snow on roads then salt then cold and everything is white with remembering.

*****

I know so little by myself.
Language knows everything for me.

*****

The secret of power is paying attention.
And that is its terrible cost.

1.I.18

=====

Maze with no middle puzzles with no outcome.
Modern mathematics
elegant solutions to no problems.
Null problems.

I am the Minotaur
I roar, I rage,
I have no labyrinth to hide in,
no path to the center of myself.

1 January 2018

=====

Something I meant to remember will have to remember me instead.
Now all I see is what I see, sun, snow, cars, caravans, comets, cat pawprints in the snow, big ones, catamount, empty cages, birds, walls crumbled, rpoof holds firm, all I can think about is spring, save me, Lady, before I remember.

2 January 2018

=====

Something about suffering.
The orchestra. Josef Suk scherzo, life just happy enough to go on. The gaps in matter, in suffering go on millimeter by milliliter until we finally get there.
Ehere? North of the Bronx, west of the Rhine. Paris would do in a pinch.

2 January 2018

=====

Released from dread one falls at last asleep.
Sleep is a waiting room, you hear strange voices through the lawyer's door.
Doctor's door. Priest's.
Somebody in there is always talking about you.

2 January 2018

= = = = =

So from the fall
forms everything:

a castle on a cushion satin offered to a queen throned on a water-lily

art abolishes gravity the castle shimmers, shakes, lights in the ballroom the queen peers in through the ogival windows and sees herself in there, all of her selves, dancing with all her others,

a bishop is standing alone solemnly blessing the dancers.
She smiles and hands
the castle back, and floats away.

2 January 2018

THE BROOKLYN RAIL

A n aquatic midsize bird. Rallida brooklinica, native to the shores and marshes of Long Island. It is a year-round resident. Its flight is swift, and has the unusual characteristic of preferring to fly into the wind instead of with it; in like manner, when on the water, it tends to beat against the current. It is skillful in discovering likely feeding locations and nesting places, so other shorebirds will often follow it to profit from its discoveries.

2.I.18

= = = = =

Silemce at the other end silence on the line.

Take pity on me, darkness, and make some sound

sound lets us see

It was as if some disease had called, and picking up the phone m,eant catching it, having it, being what it turns a person into,

always waiting and no one there.

3 January 2018

=====

What does one red car on a snowy field represent? I'll have to ask Emily, first

explaining what a car is and that's beyond me, really, but she could thoroughly explain the snow.

3 January 2018

=====

Something quiet in the forehead

a thought sleeping breathing quietly

all around it a sense of waiting for it to think.

3 January 2018

=====

Weather was always here the fear is new

*****

A man alone with the weather
--that is tragedy.

3 January 2018

ROMANTICS

are disposed to be protective of something, protect their emotions their beloveds their homeland their language

hence soon become paranoid.

Now that I see what I've just written I wonder if there is any oposite to romantic, someone who pushes beyond all these affections, protections — someone who might say to me if you care so much about language why do you keep writing it down?

4 January 2018

=====

Wait till it's over it's only beginning

when it's well underway it's almost done

each of us has our own road to walk

we're almost there.

4 January 2018

= = = = =

Gloom in discourse clouds sift snow down into the strong wind:

a huge white sentence shouted out at us

I went to the wrong school to understand what all this whiteness says.

4 January 2018

=====

I am my landscape
that's why it's hard for me to smile or show emotion facially.

Do pine trees smile?
Does a brook ever frown?

Whatever it is I feel
I have to say it,
I have to write it down.

4 January 2018

=====

Measurement too is a flower, the fingers of number hold the petal of each thing, fold them, test
the tensile strmusic of their meat.
Word. Stone. The distances themselves.

4 January 2018

=====

I have been neglecting my duty to study the clouds, guiding them around the skies of my mind in from their own blue neighborhood.

A cloud will tell you all you need to know but you have to lead it indoors, an honored guest, a pasha in your parlor, the room made just for talking, your head.

Now the cloud stretches out, prophesies.
This one up there right now is telling me something about Europe, the Urals, a man weeping on a hillside, trying to be true.

5 January 2018

=====

Keep talking — the birds are listening down in Costa Loca where I left my dream.

Parrots and cormorants, best of both worlds,
and crows, the lords of heaven.

Can you hear me, friends?
Is any word worth a feather?

5 January 2018

= = = = =

Listening to church bells when there are no churches there the cool lagoon above the frozen earth

this afternoon
floated tropic clouds church bells

blue in my ears
but no altar near

but a pirate ship
that sails beneath the sea brings back
my captured gold to me.

5 January 2018

=====

Think about colors when they're gone —

in the black and white world of writing,
where the chancery hand in legal documents
calligraphy itself
had to stand in for colors, cursive meant blue or violet, uncials meant red.

There is a green meadow in every open space,
a meadow stretching out between paragraphs of prose.

5 / 6 January 2018

=====

Speedboats of the 1930s noisy on Memory Pond

how little thing to make so big and roisterers aboard clad in white, caps

,

with peaks, scarves,
long hair like the wind!

They told us the world would be like this when we were old enough to buy our way in,

cars with no roofs,
more scarves, more long hair, sand only one lesson to be leaned: Give me more!

But now they all sail away silent on a sea of money and poor me forgot to pay so play only by remembering.

6 January 2018

HOW TO WRITE

When mind goes one way
and hand goes slower anybody can understand the few words left there before the door closes

and the horse runs away,
I feel your thighs
squeeze my withers

will I ever get to the hill in time?

6 January 2018

=====

1.

Far

from any us I ever was that water goes.

The Hudson's frozen over now, they walk halfway across it
but fifty years ago young Gaffney drove his MG on it all the way to Saugerties.

Histories. The water, though, knows none of this. Or all of it, carries its reflections south all the way to the great sea canyon nobody knows.

2.

What color are my hands?
Whose eyes stand in for mine, we hurry to the island-of-getting-born, for any me. Any me sounds like enemy — is that clear water too, busy with eels up here and seals downstream and what do they breathe beneath the ice, I mean what do they dream.

People talk about the End Time but here I am
and always will be,

sounds like enemy,
holds your hand too,
begs you to stay,

teaches you a little song to melt all the ice, lilacs and pussy willows and a great city steaming in the sun.

7January 2018

for SQ

What do I know about any you after all these years?

A year is a short-haired mongrel can't be trusted, bites randomly, sleeps when it should be on guard.

No point in trusting the years to tell me who you really are.

So take a sword to time, a machete to cut through all the undergrowth of endless days and furtive nights and come into this clean moment,

Om Vajrasattva Hung

I've heard you say so often, to cleanse your heart of enemies, and cleanse the enemies' hearts too, forgive, Forgive, Because there are no enemies.

That much I know. How far you walk.
How well you see.

2.

The rest I have to guess.
Slowly, awkwardly, I climb in behind your eyes and see the world improve right away, shadows keener, outlines sharper, animals

move smoothly, their fur glistens, a man's face looks at you and glows with light.

3.

All these years
you have been seeing.
All around you people think they understand you,
but they don't see
what you see.
So they don't see you.

4.

That's none of my business.
When I was a kid I wanted to be a troll who lived under the bridge, safe in the stone arch, a pal to water, under the thunder of traffic over, alone with the intelligent alewives, the springtime trout. And never ever have to talk to people, talk is so difficult, talking keeps a person from seeing and hearing, talk is static on the radio. Remember radio? Water and stone and earth and roads and nowhere to go, people keep passing, murmuring, maybe even a little scared, talking is just another way of being afraid.

5.

So don't expect me to say anything much.
You're part of the physics of things, and I feel comfortable with you as I do with trees and stones, those nimble stones your husband conjures, as I do with water, with the sky. The clouds are my children, did I ever tell you that? Maybe it's time I do.

7 January 2018

= = = = =

Caught off guard
I answered the phone

words flowed down my ears I caught some in my throat and sent them back, some of them. Time passed

There was silence again.
Outside a solitary figure vaguely masculine stepped downhill through the snow.

8 January 2018

=====

Every anytime waiting by your shoes the message comes the mood demands all ythe subjunctives quiver intensely in the subways of thje heart — no metaphor intended, the blue rails run in — hope will get you nowhere, a decent city doesn't charge a man to walk along its streets, picking ripe pears at the Korean corner costs a little more than nothing but who of all our citizens understands the dollar?
A curious word through Dutch from some lost valley in the busy Germanies of old.
It used to be silver in a grandpa's hand dazzling the greedy child always hungry for more knowledge that the world allows.
Permission is the rarest flower, pure white.

8 January 2018

=====

When Columbus got home he kept a diary in Hebrew not always grammatical but who am I to judge, I who spell pigeon d-o-v-e, I who cast a smaller shadow than I should, I who stand a pagan in the shivering snow but still call myself a hero — wouldn't you? Poor Columbus, we blame him for ourselves.
And of course he was Jewish—don't let that "Christopher" mislead you. Who but the Jews carried Christ into the world?

8 January 2018

=====

for Richard Strauss

Not the melody
but the intervals themselves of which melody is made, the intervals he knew to wield the wild space between mind and heart between breath and being.

And in that rising ninth I heard everything I love come back to me.

8 January 2018

HURRYING EAST

  on a strange disease
the thought slept harder, it smelled
of laurel on top of the head and it brought shadows with it uprooted from a forest past the sea.
Believe him — no reason to lie except the fun of thinking it up.
No other tongue has a word for fun.
So few words! How the thought almost woke, racked with pity for all those who would think it.
But does it work, says Wake Now in a million minds, Wake and write this down — I am what language is really for.

9 January 2018

== == == == ==

Waiting is like the cohabitation of sin with a sonnet.
Or a dance insidiously slow counting the syllables of time, the awe-struck silences.
Everything is beside the point.
Inside this imperious moment a child crying for its mother somewhere lost in what's to come.

9 January 2018

=====

Roebuck, remember?
Robert Graves on stage at the 92nd Street Y swaying like a boxer telling the ancient story he was first to declare.
Roebuck and the woman of white barley, memory unpieced, haunted islands, the secret revealed, then lost again. Only the hidden meaning matters. Behind even this house a thicket where deer drift in snow.

9 January 2018

=====

Things that matter most in the middle of the night when nothing works but memory.

Building that cabin in the woods wildturkey peeking in the window, birds are more curious than men that's why they're able to fly.

When's the last time you tried to see through a bug-hole in some leaf— what did you see that made you look away? Answer my questions and the bird will let you go back to sleep.

9 January 2018

=====

The taste of it
rising through sunlight like walking through Astoria past Ritter's bakery—
I remember his daughter

but we are the ones for whom the world was made thought by fear by desire, yearning, sweet buns in the window, cinnamon disasters

a memory is a jogger running past, his T-shirt has a word on it
he goes too fast for you to read, her ponytail swings
long after in your mind

Darkness wavers,
the bridge lights up.
We cross today
to the other side of now, purple lights at night and midway on the span a flagpole, flag straight pointing

north in a stiff breeze—ocean!

Get the numbers right.
Can't do it by counting.
Smell of coffee too,
they roast it rarely,
neighborhood habits,
chalk on sidewalk,
walk on a heart
but whose?

Teach the child to repeat “Someone else lives where I used to live, and I live where somebody else did.”
This is as good as going to church or learning to play the harmonica.
And when it’s time for the toga virilis he’ll need no sleeve to wipe his tears memory’s monotheist.

Worship only one at a time, don’t let one lead you astray the hungry desert always waiting choked with images

Everybody’s father
did something different.
Doctor, baker, garbageman, banker, every father was master of numbers, times of day, calendars, money.
Fathers of Friends are fearsome.
they rule a world
I had no wish to enter.
But after the first fatal cigarette you slide downhill into maturity, lost among grownups, the baker's daughter just a shadow on the wall.

10 January 2018

=====

Miracles are real as the minds that witness them this leper has been cleansed many a time.

10 January 2018

=====

The filling of the pen Leviticus

Wayiqra

ritual purity begins with speaking the heart

cardiophany

the words reveal.

Purity
is a sound in the sky
a bird flying by.

Cleanse the wall
with looking.
Cleanse your heart
by speaking.

10 January 2018

=====

My natural way is line by line—
that's how I breathe,

morning's asthmatic,
afternoon robust,
evenings riverine, fluminous.

Blue words on a white page, what beautiful weather!
(This is what I whisper in confession.)

10 January 2018

=====

Is there anything left for me?
A bowl of dried figs poached now to make them tender, a pan shallow with water, not a hint of moonlight, a cloud like a dancer stretched all around the sky. None of these allotted, all of them seized by sensory appetite. Senses are the wolves of the world, ravaging up everything. Hear the car passing much too fast, a sound that breaks the law,
The law. Leviticus. Interferences with natural attentiveness to all that passes near us, all we can reach and apprehend.
So it's all for me and none of it.
Maybe Eden was too easy.
Maybe we've always been wrong.

10 January 2018

=====

The Choros enters here slogging through mud they make it look like dance they sing, happy workshop pretend there are birds singing too, springtime

what does song have to do with tragedy, the very word means goat-song, the song they sing when they kill the goat for some god.

we all know how to hear it still.

11 January 2018

= = = = =

Children in the air floating towards their mothers who leap up to catch the favored one but often have to settle for a lesser fish,
some blinking child.

On other planets
all this is done
differently, with spoons or flowerbeds
or even in the body of the one who leaps.

11 January 2018

there is a blue box when I type
it appears around each letter and is blue