Record Their Impressions of Division Panels

The discussion of the individual divisions was, perhaps, the most important aspect of the Student Conference, COMMUN.ITAS asked various members of the faculty representing various divisions and the visiting students reactions were to the conference and what they felt these students were primarily interested in by exploring the subject, "What Good is a College Education?"

Gerani DEGRE ..

Div. of Social Studies

Last Saturday, May 8th, students and faculty of the Social Studies Division gathered with a goal of discussing the Bard action in social studies. The discussion centered around two questions being asked by the faculty. One question had to do with the transmission of the cultural heritage, but as the basis for the development of a philosophically mature critical attitude, in other words education for non-commercial ends. The other was: just as we are with a period of change in a rapidly evolving society, so is it with education. Certainly, a reformulation of our studies, our community, be so useful as we can and must find their own answer. We need to reflect upon our self-portrayal. The world is in a day-to-day upheaval. The adoption of a positive move in this direction is of utmost importance.

The idea of this question was attacked by the members of the group from the first level, both students and faculty members participated in the social studies. The discussion centered around two questions: how does one go about being an educated person? and how do learning processes work? The question, in considering these questions, particular interest was presented. The answer to the latter question is that one must integrate one's self with the society.

Here and There

by MARVIN FLECKER

It is certainly a sad state of affairs when in a community as small and as closely tied to Bard one must certainly be able to lock the door when leaving the campus. This is the unfortunate reality of petty thefts of money denominations. Peters and McVicker have been raided in the week before. No longer is there a safe place to leave money in your rooms and leave the doorknob alone.

Dr. Maurice Taintor, Vice President of the Sterling-Winthrop Drug Company, has expanded on dissipation of time by his students. A number of World class bodies of knowledge have remained the Frank Student from time to time consumed in with an unfortunate rapidity of petty thefts of money denominations. Peters and McVicker have been raided in the week before. No longer is there a safe place to leave
