COLUMBIA DEAN VISITS COLLEGE

Hawks Explains Stand On Call For Malkin: Important Organization

Dean Herbert Hawks of Columbia College visited the campus on November 17th for his first visit to Bard in several years. He expressed admiration for what is being carried on in the field of progressive education here and told of his interest in our work. He said he hoped the idea of individual understanding and development can be carried forward. There is now a great movement taking place in colleges. At Bard here you have a unique opportunity to make and mold your principles."

When asked to give his opinion of the Bard case he explained how the whole situation had arisen. It grew out of the appointment of members of the Bard faculty at the Heidelberg Convention. It was delayed in March to send representatives from Columbia and the other nine who signed the declaration. Further objection was prolonged, with the inevitable result that there existed a general dissatisfaction among the members of the faculty that the case of academic liberty and not the recognition of trade-unions and the tender of a fellowship in residence at Yale is foremost.

As is the opinion of the deans of every college, the only aid the town nurse, said that the college money has been used for a public health service for the needy families of Red Hook.

BARD CLINIC OPENS: MALADJUSTED CHILD SUBJECT OF STUDY

The Bard College Guidance Bureau held its first clinic on Wednesday, November eighteenth. According to the plan of operation, Dr. C. W. Wolfe, Chief of the Hudson River State Hospital, and an assistant psychologist spent the entire day in attempting to analyze and interpret the maladjustments of six Red Hook children. The patients of the day were school problems: one or two shyness and timidity, and one or two that often lead to major delinquency. It is the good fortune of the psychology department to be able to study the psychology of a definite and unique problem from such a practical standpoint. It will be of the utmost interest to the department of psychology that the clinic is maintained during the next year with enthusiastic cooperation from the psychology department.

Boole's work on logic and probability is a seminal contribution to the field of mathematics and logic. His ideas have had a profound impact on various areas of science and technology, including computer science, artificial intelligence, and information theory.

We are finally aware of ourselves as an integral part of the universe, and our existence is but a tiny moment in an infinite series of events. Life itself is a mystery, and we are only beginning to comprehend its nature.

In conclusion, Boole's work on logic and probability forms the foundation of modern mathematical logic and probability theory. His ideas continue to influence contemporary research in these fields and beyond.

COUNCIL REPORTS ON DINING COMMONS

Improving the general conditions of Commons and have been accepted by the Administration. They will be put into use in the near future, probably after the Thanksgiving vacation.

The suggestions of the Council are:

1. The congestion of students in Commons is responsible for many of the criticisms leveled against Commons. It is recommended, therefore, that students be permitted to use the faculty dining room and that the crowding in the main hall. Waiters will then be able to work more efficiently and give more individual attention to their tables.

2. The irregular attendance of students, faculty and guests in dining commons has resulted in an inconsistent proportion between food supply and demand. An unpleasant problem has been the limitation on the amount of food served to individuals.

The Council suggests the following system whereby attendance can be a prepared for a week in advance. Every Thursday the students and faculty will be given a slip of paper by the head-waiter and will mark on it what day he expects to be absent from Commons, or whether he is planning to entertain any guests.

All papers will not have to be returned to the office. Waiters will be instructed to indicate the number of people in each party by the number of slips returned. The Administration will keep in Commons for the week in question.

“By this system it is hoped that breakfast will be served from eight to noon the morning and that the working schedules of the student waiters be adjusted as not to conflict with their classes.

1. The Council approves the plan of the plan to serve meals on Fridays as well as on Saturdays and Sundays. It is recommended that the Council that any suggestions or complaints about dining commons be presented to person or in writing to the Council. The Council in turn will take the suggestions with the proper authorities.

THE BARDIAN

November 24, 1936

Dean Hawks "The student body is disgusted with Burke and support for his is coming from outside interference, not from within the College. The time is now, therefore, that a survey will be made among the students and faculty to discover who will want to continue this present system in place of the new system which will be put into use in the near future. In any case, Burke's conversations were considered most unsatisfactory by the faculty."

ANNUAL CAMPAIGN FOR NEEDY IN RED H K

The Council in turn realized that the Corporation expected the refusals of Burke's conversations would be considered most satisfactory by the faculty. Dean Hawks expressed the opinion that the assistance given by Bard College towards alleviating the poor conditions of Red Hook has become about an increasing appreciation of the college by the tenino-piece.

Last year the students and members of the faculty gave forty dollars to the College, and additional money provided by the fund. The assistance given by Bard College towards alleviating the poor conditions of Red Hook has become about an increasing appreciation of the college by the tenino-piece.

The case is now closed.
