1-2011

janG2011

Robert Kelly

Bard College

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts

Recommended Citation

http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts/381 THE WHEREABOUTS OF THE WOUND ice fell or your father’s daughter not mine a broadcast value seminal in lame earth yet by some dint blossoms—whose?

Are you listening gorgeous? Famous lunches of the Athenians, nurses prompt to pleasure, navy base an island? To wrap myself in you as distances blue with mist importune your animals by whisper be it said that bare muscles hear whose wettest song

Then when morning finally got around to getting here with all its buses and blank faces our notebooks folded and we too ismissed among the weary nurses and the city did painterly shimmers for us across the ultimately uncrossable lagoon—a word ill-suited to the ever-falling snow.

28 January 2011
Had to catch enough of it to begin take myself out of the game later the way the wind falls out of the trees at five o’clock and the earth breathes up replace me with a more accurate theology just let me find my glasses to find the shelf that hides the book I’ll take my glasses off to read adventures in Wombat Land when god was young because there is something old about the place.

Any place. As if it were here alone long before we came to visit or infest it. And that’s palpably unlikely. Nothing was before we are.
And what could it know itself with without our eyes?

28 January 2011
BLISS

catch’s a snow word a loaded word gone west in our sinister acropolis (in shadow of Ionic columns rubbed her back on a pilaster) because it is always appropriate to walk slowly around a thing holding a twig of pear tree in your fingers lightly as if you’d gone to dowse the intentions of the Coming Beast (roll over, you’re snoring) I need my coffee, religion is too far from here in human weather (teeth of ancient rhetoric, zeugma thee with me or is it a much bigger bird stromhos to hoist thy chariot to me) pelt of a virgin, torque of a Celt (what is gold? answer at the back of the book) in fact love is exactly like algebra but I can’t at the moment say why can you liberty has something to do with it, solving for two unknowns, but why in Arabic?
Children wait for politics to be over have you noticed all the naked dancers who celebrate city ceremonies in the clouds how they cavort solemnly as liturgy talking only with their moving limbs or scordatura of wind chittering oak trees brown those corpse leaves left to mock our summer (o come to me again this time I won’t or let you go, take off your clothes there are so many books to read) aggressors natural this climate got to eat nobody ever counts the flowers in the vase or if they do don’t bother with the petals so we are surrounded by an innumerate beauty (earth has fingers we touch no skin but our own) my prize icicle is four feet long in polished silver card-case see the lily reflect last night’s music unheard now reechoes (a property of morning like stubble on my chin) touch me I am a foreigner hear me awake do people live in houses for wrong reasons? is there a climate where Cleopatra’s still alive still young audacious and skilled in chemistry linguistics she with the great pharmakon she who was the last to read the stones?
(listen harder if you crave her attention) the birds are weary with their own clamor like playing children waiting for nightfall voice of the mothers bidding them come home away from the contingencies of other people (no one can suffer like a child don’t you remember?) roll over and talk to me at last or is all this just a one-night stand but the night never ended?

29 January 2011
The figure walking where we know an uttermost animal no matter that she speaks it is between us and the snow—language made me, and the marshes of Long Island, not much more than that I know, some agency I’ve always known just out of sight but prompted me clearly, sometimes I listened.

Who is she after all except the apex of a triangle, me abashed and the great unknown.

30 January 2011
A piece of word lying in the snow.
A board. What could lumber really mean?

30 January 2011
Gave too much seed and we got rats.
That’s a few years ago but the point holds. Not the what but the where.

Be generous far from home. The Oxfam principle—local suffers need not apply.
Our gifts are glory overseas.

30 January 2011
If only they didn’t smile so much or make me worry about the cause of it or them and I don’t even know who they are a two day storm is brewing in the west if snow and ice can be said to brew and here we are sun shining on hot coffee we know what that means the speakable becomes the thinkable while crows inspect the air—desire is one, but has so many faces like greasy fingerprints left on the sky.

31 January 2011
Is it there yet, the achieve thing like a boat battered on the rocks till it’s stoved in and sinks except for the stuff of it, wood and cord, the actual, which goes on floating as long as water is, its design scribbled into the universe.

31 January 2011
Plan:
to write the poem into things

not like graffiti but like an echo slow to die away

heard again each time you strike the rock.

31 January 2011
= = = = =

After, not before.
I’ll be upset afterwards after the circuitous meeting and the dismal memorandum, then there is time to wonder at the incestuous union it is to be with any human.
Or those prints in the snow, animal? Human? Whoever came close is gone now.
Will it always be so?

31 January 2011
μονσε

To be docile beneath her only sometimes half protest or seem to,
she silences
my emptiness.

31 January 2011