8-2003

augC2003

Robert Kelly
Bard College

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts/905 Neither here nor another a place north of elsewhere with a small air
    but quick sometimes
    like a rill of it where other world would torrent or a bishop beating his breakfast or a coddled child easily ennui’d from the very start I missed the mark did not bring my sister into my world for I was desperate and another now this nescience feels to choke and prison me with punishments, i.e., results of that evasion, by disdaining her betraying all

    so that no matter
every word is a confession.

9 August 2003
PHILATELIST

Why only pictures of the dead on postage stamps?
Is language dying? Is the mail something that happens to the dead?

Leave them to the architraves of public schools.
I want the faces of the living to read me, smile or frown, kiss my ambitious envelopes.

9 August 2003
THE FATHER

Cry of a child down the road a peacock’s cry or why is it natural to make another, am I not me enough? Lines of your palm no children and a thousand doors.

And on my palm I see one child marked plain someone already in the world I have to travel up and down to find.
asking every girl I meet Are you my son?

That’s what everybody’s really looking for, the pre-existent consequence, effect before the cause, the virgin’s son, the daughter of the unicorn.

9 August 2003
NOSTALGIE

The margins of the skull the school beginning with charcoal marks meet the wall monks live in a blue time near the zeppelin hanger or chalk, you can always use chalk it wants to come home glacial melt-off in such hot weather anxiety silenced the herald his words too much for his voice just let water keep dripping from his gloves woolen sodden fingertips they’ll get the idea someone is born

time is such a brutal silence trying to change glory
by the numbers
ratcheting sly waves erosion among human swimmers when the ice is gone to way to bring it back salt among the vast array of voyages

10 August 2003
THE COMING RACE

will hurry to inhabit lupines mid February
inverse mountains

the new virility casts all in lust
walking to meet the oracle no smoke from the shaman’s cave all his fire’s inside her now she knows I’m coming

somehow brings me from my native customs to these tropics of the mind where I’ll call and they know how to understand awake when all the rest is sleeping.

10 August 2003
MELVILLE

Among the certainties, bamboo or where are you in the cabin under Greylock dreaming your fish letting wet things fall on you to understand the sea

so many years?
Tooth on the writing table we have to understand our things given to us by speckled destiny everything is weather.

11 August 2003
LIEBESLIED

But asking for it is a string quartet when you wanted simple lips close to your ear humming a song you were supposed to remember from some tipsy last time that never happened and you didn’t anyway because you were just born in her world that minute from an island nobody could have predicted marshes and mangroves along the hard sea.
Do lips hum? You don’t think so, you don’t care, you want the occasion, let meaning take care of itself, all that matters is what happens.

11 August 2003
Little achievements
a raindrop
on my knee a lost kingdom in Luristan.

11 August 2003
THE URGENCY

But I want your now
to be mine too,
    dust
inside a clock
oily with you,
clogging and lubricating at once the frail inexorable gears.

11 August 2003
how small can something be and still make sense erode the obvious leaves nothing erode the superfluous leaves less everything is always too much every word is a risk, and two is worse and with a short sentence the whole planet heard its doom

11 August 2003
Nothing here but what is here, the conspiracy reaches my knees.
If you want to sail to China first carve the wind.

11 August 2003
CASTAWAY

The long sleep that left him somewhere else lifted its sails and was gone. This quiet beach of trees and gardens roads and rain did not seem strange.

Could he have been here before? It did not taste like yesterday but every leaf seemed of his family.
Maybe he was the other one now, the other man inside him he always hoped or feared he was, the one who was with him all the time and saw everything he saw but with strange eyes.
After all these years they’d changed places in the night.

12 August 2003
HARVEST

Old Lammas today
feast of betrayals
so much captured from her fields

so many hostages
from the green world
we pay for later
later with our red sleep.

12 August 2003

red sleep a kenning for death Almost ever a breeze a lot of waiting on this deck
but the ship, the ship goes and the salt
stays?

12 August 2003
CAUSES

Morgan in white
arriving in trees,
sun roughed her skin

or was it having a child, the substance of it comes from the mother

the father a little but it’s adopted
even so, to be on earth draws from someone substance is finite

it is not measured

it pours from her into the child
I never had

I wanted it all for me.
Or do I mean for you?
Selfishness

has so many hands.

12 August 2003
ADOPTION

Born from the body of the Law an adopted child is Mitra’s child, love and contract mingled old god, old agreements, the love that moved whirling precise words through our unclear desires.

12 August 2003
ASKING

I keep asking but the animal has own ideas morning sun evening shade sums it up and why should there be question?

Isn’t asking the first disease? Isn’t every question an aggression?

This hurts, that doesn’t, I’m right-handed and hungry and still waiting. But does handedness happen in animals or is it one more of our peculiar mistakes?

13 August 2003
LADY OF DELPHINIUMS

Lady of Delphiniums
in every neighborhood
you were my novena

I watched your house
I memorized your door
I stalked your shadow

the flowers grew, your father shaped the hedges you moved through not looking you had no time for flowers you left them for the likes of me to understand

I’ve gotten as far as their names now you came home later and later I can’t tell one rose from another black flowers angry flowers night clenches its fists in the leaves.

How shall I play this scene?
Shall I give them what they want, which is the method of hell or shall I follow the angels’ method and give them what they need?

7:44 am 14 August 2003
ARDOR

Banish ardor — ardor leaves ash.

But ash and fat
make soap,
two kinds of dirt
make clean.

Let emotion heal the other.

Chemistry is radical to writing — do it by elements, states of matter, catalysts,
not alchemy
but the extraordinary ordinary of what this does to that.

Poetry is the science of result, so let ardor?
Let the swell
of feelings
all that lipid mingle with lye
— the same in any language — and clean the table on which, later

you might set an empty plate to contemplate

or put a radish on it to be red and formal

no plash of virgin’s blood no wine?

“I love you for the ash you leave the mild ceremony of your silence the things you tell me later hold me happy till the next”

as when the mowers come to break the morning

or a hawk falls on a red bird feeding — no, no birds. No morning.

14 August 2003
KEW

Now the smell of cut grass makes me think of Kew Gardens interesting outside as in the walk from the station to it polite hordes of floral tourists mooching past iron-railinged row houses to the prison of flowers where we all are trapped in light.

14 August 2003
That’s just memory,
what good is that?

To know then
with now’s mind,

that’s pleasure.

14 August 2003