Without the promised rain some rapture still.

I think of you when I recall snug-trouser girls in bowling alleys who took my breath away as I watched them curve and dip to make so beautifully their paltry scores.

For being is everything.

To gather desire to yourself is to be a star in the sky no matter what.
Stay long in brightness as you can, the dark is common, endless, base romanticism to suck us in.

Whereas you are beautiful and difficult, you make splits not strikes, you have menses, stupid boyfriends, absurd self-images made of doubt and Cosmo ads and with all that you’re the bearers of the dawn, archer, icon, motorboat from heaven, the glory of your humdrum lives made sudden And you’re the only one knows how to make it rain.

I don’t have to understand Just have to watch

White lime sand dry earth A spring of everything

I don’t have to have a name To be green inland water if I could live with you in the animal, the oriental cyberskills rehearsing scenarios of timeless penetration rituals a man falls in love with himself falling in love, who is that woman in the window, and reading your letter from Poland how do I pronounce an s with a feather in its hat?

Everyone a foreigner.

Think of me as a disaster, a lost star hungering for human habits, finding none,

being awkward as a sheep in the shearsman’s fingers and speaking of fleece the spanish moss hangs down now floats in the live oak, a boat goes by.
They live for movement and I want to be still, the fervent arguments of virtue to enact.
If I could do what I want to do with you all I want is to be bigger than the jungle and not be alone.
We are far from the sea here, we left without answering all it asked, interminable psychoanalysis the waves bringing the question always back to you.
Zion. Miriam having deep conversation with her man, their fingers touching one another too.
Risen. Zion. The new born elders of this Atlantean temple the two of us are. Legs columns seashells red sand I finally found the place where I was born.

First middle last letters of the alphabet spell \textit{emeth}, truth.

Emmes, we said when I was a kid, as if it were a familiar thing, its name fitting our mouths.

First middle and last—so truth is the extremity of the sayable, the edge of silence plus the core of what is said.

What does a word mean?
Trees. Sacrifice.

Think of how we speak.

A word offered. The river goes.

walking around the jetty peaceful fisherwomen at Cedar Key bayous beyond the Gulf of Mexico at last.

Things take in mouth the way women age against the grain of trees grapevines willow stand on limestone rim above a sunken place ancient rainfall filled.
Drought now and the sea is far, its agitations do not interpret the land before us hot and whole we get the first kiss of its information.

Gave the king his land He gave him back a plot to live on Live on two bags of barley for a year And gave a quarter of that for offerings. Fire sacrifices. Offer.
Offer everything and be.

All boats are lies.
A river is all regulation but no one listens, it’s like a dollar, all sermon and no spinach, we keep coming back to love the kleenex index who will let me take myself seriously enough to suffer for me to let me also weep

outmoded manners, love poems sending telegrams to queens.

2.
The truth is in the ground in the last days of oil economy battle for the obvious against the subtle criminals suck the word’s marrow what else do I have to give you, what will last beyond this stock exchange of lust out in the plague-struck caravan.

3. weep weep because you lose the one you mean the kleenex customs of a new religion problem child of loss romance is the only real

I am an airport sick with destinations longtime president of doubt a master mason by eyes alone build Shulamith her Temple sex change every afternoon the pillars scratching the sky the white one the black one blue crystal instead of eyes 4. swimming pool all day the heads emerge in accurate conversations this is the business of the world to come up for air now and again to float the body innocent and clean 5.

Be a tourist in your underpants In killjoy weather exalted thought This country is the opposite of talk.

TURTLES

The turtles of Dixie County are large and limber, seem at home in limepit pools and sandy woods bare as Berlin.

I have been here in dream before now unrelenting green incubator heat as if the newborn from the north need such breathless care.
And the sun all day long a kind of Muzak in the sky.
We are pale in the face of such determined prospering, be botanical, be vegetable and wise, have turnip heads and kudzu hands wanting to touch it all and hold.

DAWN ON THE SUWANEE

1.
As if I were a scientist of empty rivers I stare into this mist.
Two eyes already and nothing seen 2. ext except what simply seems.

And there it is, the smell of river, willow, a Carolina wren reciting all she knows, some other creature eloquent far away.

3. we have come so far to be so ignorant, everything at rest except the question.

Overcast. Seven and the tyrant sun (ten minutes risen) has still not wormed through the mist.

But east is different, a pale before yellow before red is trying to lift the light and the wren is closer or sings louder, how can I tell, the renaissance by which I live scale perspective and how to think was not built with birds in mind.

Nothing in mind.

Cevici cevici cevici says the wren sounding like Romanian. Ana Bodea I miss you. The Iron Gates

I will fly over soon, hurrying east to come back soon, a bird would sicken on these whys, how can there be so many languages and so little certainty.

A whippoorwill – first in fifty years.

REPORT FROM THE WORLD OF PLEASURE

Schuyler’s still a shark. I shark, I shark, I botchu, I botchu! Southern shark, two hours this game has pleased him. Cool at poolside, I’ve checked then baseball scores and understand.
The palms by the pool, the paranoia.
There are sharks, after all, not far, and things do pursue us. Here’s sharpa, here’s sharpa, then he roars SHARPA, mixing shark with sharp, the teeth he’s thinking, then teeth you don’t see in this underwater world of our sensations days drown in sun. The furled upright table umbrella is a crowned Blessed Virgin, tattered white robe, a flounce of coif, gilt finial for her heavenly crown.
No face. The oldest virgins in the world had no faces. Only functions. Like me, right here, unseen by you, writing this down.

TAKE OFF

The crying baby greets the Dakinis, sky-walkers, the luminous presences from whom we improvise, for whom the mind sky and brain are one continuum, a thought in brightness.
And where do you think the stars are stored?

Edgewise to earth a wing is a kind of glad refusal rhythmic spurning by which the earth as long as the breath lasts can be refuted.

A MAP OF MY POETRY

dots on an outline map shores and rivers boundaries of states and nations,

        dots that are spoken into space, where have I been.
Words are the spooks of place.

2.
As a child I had an outline map of the US a template in oaktag, stab with a penpoint through the holes and make points, later connect the points you’d made and find the outline of the country. What is the inline?
It was what got said when a voice in my head smiled in me and said Missouri or this is where your father took your mother on their honeymoon a little bit outside the boundaries you know how to draw.
This was the inline, what the shape of the map, shape of hills and fall of rivers made happen in my head in words I knew how to write down. The names of cities.
That is all. That is the map of my poetry.

3.
And later when women came walking along the same voice tried to map them too to be true to the outline of the feelings, to be true to the inline of what they made me do, body and mind,

I was hateful as a clam thinking about the sea.
Who can listen to such long intelligence all long life never not saying?

Because every meeting is a doing and each one changes all the rest.

THE PROFESSION

I am a traveling wise man.
I travel. I'm not Very wise but it's my job,
Not very good at it But good enough.
Not every baker is the best,
He still makes bread.

BLUES

We’ve got two colors called blue,
sky and then the indigo, angel and devil (blue as my wings) and when they fight it our inside a man he’s got the blues.

30 April 2002
A day with no moonrise this day where the moon went down after we woke and what do we have to look forward to at night but night, daughter of pleasure and the blues.
Everything waits for us.
