Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts/1248

This Manuscript is brought to you for free and open access by the Robert Kelly Archive at Bard Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Robert Kelly Manuscripts by an authorized administrator of Bard Digital Commons. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@bard.edu.
THE VESTMENTS

Asking the point to penetrate some flowers can grow without shadow I am not remembering rightly some hills have only an up and nothing hurries you, Levity, to rise.

Do you want to taste the clouds?
Do you want everything to be clearer than the world?
Semnai theai Powys calls them, Goddesses much to be revered whose ægis covers us. The clouds.

Blur or flurry or soft of their meanings.
Do you want it simple as beer done by Egyptians with sugar in the dark then they let you have it you in your wet clothes addicted to action?

Sometimes it is warm at the barrier of sense their zebra finches' egg was cracked but still the couple drove their first-born away always leaving room for the next remark o sex you rhetoric

Rousseau was like God his highest pleasure in self-revealing tempests of Exodus healed in living cloth for we were truly naked once and what you call our naked bodies were the first and second Garments woven

Nessus suits we can't take off.

But we were naked once before the sexes and so called naked people still feel or give a tiny thrill of that first

Presence
we were before the myth of clothes became the word of flesh, yet this too is a sweet weaving this cloud of toothache and brief orgasm in which we find and lose and give ourselves.

Striptease a species of philosophy that like formal logic gets stuck in its procedures. Obsessed with know-how it knows nothing.

To arouse without reminding—what good is that?
Or remind without revealing, what benefit?

For we were naked once of such distinctions.

9 January 1993
WINTERDAY

for Charlotte

That the sky seems to fall le ciel est glace the water is a locked door the birds hide in cloud where is the sweet conversation of the little dam the Latin spoken by gravity in all that silvery tumbling

Earth has invaded heaven the arrogant sobriety of our dark habits impeaches luminosity lovers will be miles apart clean smell of the skin on the backs of their hands thinking she is on the other side of the snow.

10 January 1993
In at the mort, the respire, gasp of the dying animal the hoot of hunters, celebrating a wash of grey over the morning and it’s all done, it’s far away, nothing is left but death in the field demon pleasures of the mindless rich.

10 January 1993
“AND THE FEAST IS FOLLOWED BY THE COMMON DAY...”
—Leopardi

for Frederick Hammond

Each one of us knows one poem maybe one single poem that no one else knows, and each one brings it, we bring it with us all the sea weed and Gothic arches of it into the light of other people's hearing, into their private lives.

10 January 1993
AN INCIDENT OF DOMESTIC HISTORY

Climbing up the stairs he saw the steps coming towards him the treads advancing faster and faster until it seemed to him he was falling and even as his feet reached the top of the stairs his body was hurtling down he stood panting at the top and felt his body crash from tread to tread and still not reach the bottom.

What is this that comes towards us? he asked and understood that he was dying and was neither going nor coming nor staying.

11 January 1993
for Charlotte

The word in his hands wondering

the faculty asleep to charm small birds a line is what begins with The a line is music as a feather falls he doesn't know the gravity of the occasion so caught up he she in speaking to it the words by armature unseen wound or wounded round stand free

and airs (L'aura) coaxes to, this old shake
used to call the Dance, secret consolamentum of the Cathars

the sacrament of giving your body to someone else What other garden do we have to give?

You go on foot to it. The road is the same as the mountain.
Climb into the curious sound she tells me is the whistle of a hawk and up there in the house made alone of light live inside the word.

11 January 1993
Mourning dove in snow the walls of this little valley go up grey today bare trees in lightly falling snow turn mist the mist turns rock the cliffs comprehend us and a little water goes it is like living in a bone

Allow the hand to move the scattered letters ("alphabet soup") will never stop coming back and making sense

Dog on the beach at Malibu a tarry dog stumbling over the mildly crashing waves I have the sand in my hand I listen to it then let it sift away and listen to my skin instead that touches everything there is no dog or beach or sea or dove it doesn't tell It is like living in a hill above the world and under it at once everything is an adventure everything comes but I didn't mean to talk about my skin that map of France, Garance, I didn't mean yet one more river the Dranse falling just past your toes into interminable caverns full of moss and cyclamen and guides

I didn't mean this politics at all I live inside this hungry place the Battlefield of Endurance, Patient Corners,
    my house of cards my head's deep south, my dixie, my precious human body, my dread

I wanted to talk about something that lasts longer than that like an Old Welsh grammar or a leaf.

12 January 1993
EARTHQUAKE WEATHER.

More snow more flakes more hexagrams.
Print learned from hand now to admire how a hand feigns print.
How well we do what we sometimes are.
Teach machine to teach us.
People in the salt mines sous-Detroit their avenues open to miraculous revenge—the whole world of minerals is against us!
They are Gods the crystals, the angles that live inside the earth! And they deny us for all our taking, our deep envy, how much we want to be what we think they are, things, just things. A cube of it inside her she is inside.
Absolute answers from time's emulsions precipitated. Out. The ancient print returns me to the top menu namely the resting mind above the fretful relays of the brain itself a kind of angry bone beautifully dithering, Admiral, to be in control of perpetual motion, waves, no fleet but the day's weather.

13 January 1993
LES ENFANTS

for Charlotte

Every man in love is just a fool and this fool is the plowman of the world the helmsman and the magistrate for whom the law is made

And this fool in his floury white clothes bedraggled through the jostling streets of what is always Paris when I love you rushes to you his empty hands his lips wide open silently mouthing your name.

13 January 1993
A face of leather pried loose from the shoe of mind a year the river of Berlin pins stuck to the lapel of her the Air Force of Underground we fly the soles of our feet she sauntered out of the mountain into my mind glass in hand a kind of duchess of earthquakes a kind of obligation remembered from before some long War :

Her smile was made of lipstick but did smile, her eyes were made of smoke but did see me.
Alone of all the brotherhood I had caressed her hair.

13 January 1993
CAUSE HIDDEN IN EFFECT

The hand reaching out of the desert carries the infrequent blossom of the Caducerea it is red with white stipples on its sepals it is red with yellow business in its heart

I don't know enough about his flower I know only his arm, it is a man's rough arm reaching out of the desert with this blossom proffered to me like a casual remark from a friend at my side as we walk along through a crowded market commenting on this and on that but there's no one here no crowd no city no busy rememberers.

It is a hand holding a red flower in some desert and it means to be giving it to me.

What kind of friendship or even love is it that finds expression in such mysterious presents puzzling the way a shadow is on the glaring sand and I look up and see that nobody's there.

14 January 1993
Belonging to the thing seen holding on to that—because the weather is no rich inheritance but we do have it here something white and feathery along every tree looking for a book of poems by Robert Barlow the kettle has come to a boil January is halfway through they are waiting for me at the end of it with knives with miracles belonging to the gods we intuit in the empty room the marble air.

14 January 1993
IN MEMORY OF JOHN COWPER POWYS

I have been using this world an amazing eon white and black plumage like an auk northern responsibilities I will transpose my bower into the heart of a ruby— lap of a rose to remember the name of every single animal who touched my desert ever running swift under my groaning palms—sand storm — thieving blue jays — Ordovician rock baffling my ears — o animaux o chaste conveyancers of our fitful dawning sense of what is real, this mortgaged hour between a pain and a pain I fall down the graduations of colored light Scriabin is proud of me I am fond of finches a paramour made of shadow arched over the land like a map of God.

15 January 1993
“We must act as our wise Devil did,” murmured Murdrawla, “and sit on the floor of the World while the rising tide of Nature’s wildest intention is checked by a splutter of chance and calmed down by the steadily blowing wind of destiny.”

This is a sentence written by an 87 year old man. I wonder if a finer one came out of this century. Even if neither he nor I really know what Chance or Destiny could possibly mean in or out of context. The words don't matter. The sentence matters. The shape of it matters. Like a glacier, a continent. A planet. Of which we are momently the population.

15 January 1993
Meaning is the commandment of the patriarch but sensation the gift of the motherhouse—therefore the translator is free to free her poem from the propositional into the experiential that is, the order (= succession) of image experiences (images experienced in relation).

Always to meet the lad carved rock the horse heavy Rock Chalk Cafe the murders in sunlight what can be gained by resistance Gestapo manners on the rise it is a political weather believe me Ink costs more than bread bread costs more than cigarettes That is how it was the relations of production geologist's pioche Underearthing Trotsky the cheapest thing I could bring you Would be news of a flower seen somewhere growing heard of January in the back of mind also worth bothering you with My pusher my banker and me the means of production renew Vile contract law a rock leaps from the cliff saves the assassin No jury convicts a hopeless amalgam of misprints a poem What is this thing in his brain on the verge of minding his mind

16 January 1993