6-1993

junA1993

Robert Kelly
Bard College

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.bard.edu/rk_manuscripts/1271

This Manuscript is brought to you for free and open access by the Robert Kelly Archive at Bard Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Robert Kelly Manuscripts by an authorized administrator of Bard Digital Commons. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@bard.edu.
The one who gets up first gets the last piece of rye bread

but all the heritage of night comes with it

we drink the black drink.

1 June 1993
Car doors. Sir Henry Baskerville runs in fear of his life again. A heart condition called a dog in the dark.

1 June 1993
Who were the Gods when you were born, the weather? Did you notice it when they abandoned the earth on the endless journey back to the mind?

Not quite endless. Not quite notice. Parmenides was there waiting for them celebrating each with a word, a special rhythm, a tone row, an elegant proof, a hidden axiom that deranges all their plans. Still, it's better than coming home to an empty house.

1 June 1993
When I was a child there was no weather I loved better than an empty house. Send this out on the network in my name and see if an answer comes like a hand laid quiet on the small of my back.

1 June 1993
Form is too big for us, marry in haste, our Lent is measure. Starlight comes to our wedding, animals are evergreen. In the high desert sons plot against their fathers. But here we must be patient, follow the path through all her weaving, Sophie's web threadless and serene.

1 June 1993
[for Prajñaparamita]
Some fighting among the écureuils today, pourquoi? they vie so prettily on each base appetite — who is lordlier than me in seed? They squabble like memories, an old man dying at his desk.

1 June 1993
remembering E.W.
Like a murderer from behind the arras
the sun slips out.

1 June 1993
I'm thinking short sings today it must be the squirrels my fear.

1 June 1993
The woe lives in the fingers why there is a rose pried open by inquirers do they listen to what they let fall

2.

It has to be simpler has to be bone or a bone adrift in daylight guessing

3.

Unzip the answer to this soft question the package is everything the world proclaims 4.

Analysis at least is.

2 June 1993
IN VEXATION, THINK OF LONDON

Why doesn't it come to hand today & why does Blake sit there in the second room bent over his Copper Ocean stretching lines from the loins of his imperious Creatures that loop from the mind to the broken shells of the world this Lambeth this grief?

someone alive at the image-bank draws the clouds of identity down around us name by name proposing a different musculature for these gorgeous shadows we walk out in shimmering through the streets and reaching the kindly river the bargemen the feluccas plying between Chelsea and the Isle of Dogs

let the empire come back upon itself like a fist closing let the palps of fingertips hide in the groove of the palm let the hidden hide in sunlight and glory the fountains splay by the obelisk the museums are on fire the flames are slow and blue and favoring where is my watch when does the opera begin at Paul's house worshippers silently chew.

2 June 1993
Everything is behind me.
Everything is in front of me and it hurts.
Everyone is in front of me and it hurts.
Everyone is hidden from me.
Everything is above my head.

3 June 1993
Try to explain a candle.

Try to ask what a word means before you say it.

Everything alive. Even this lost thought grows fur and feet, scurries into the dark.

Lost to the one who thinks it it lives for others.

I mean ask the candle what it means.

3 June 1993
THE GREAT INPUT

Measuring the input across the terminals we find again an historic disposition ("drive") towards sleep. Six a.m. I batter sweet rainlight hard against my eyes to hold the cloakful color of the green in dense boscage, in the way.

In the way things are. I am permitted any species of pause, from a breath to a death. The potential builds again at the synapse of the heart, gap-jump, new life, the thought arrives.

Unarisen it is there, unbanished it is gone, there until you go to look for it, not even a gazebo out back of the mind, let alone a house.

And from all the snoozy clamor of measure One comes to wake us.

4 June 1993
Full Moon of Sakadawa.
I'd like to tell you the stations of this journey call out the names in our native language of each stop. At every station the doors slide open and a different one of me gets out. The rest of me rides on undiminished, hopeful as ever, blue in cavelight, mumbling more names.

And this recitation would be my chronicle enough.
The New York word for getting what you want.
The word for touching the hand of a stranger, for having a friend and being faithful, for keeping the practice of the presence of mind. Some light.

As if anything is still the subway and I go.

4 June 1993
All night the renga
wrestles with the moon.

No. Begin again.
All night the moon.

4 June 1993
[A S I C A N]

for Charlotte

a wedding
for us

after so much marriage something new

to be worn
a fidelity

inside the sky taken to heart “forsaking”

the logical mistakes, enter

we being people enough

to be us full.

4 June 1993
KEEPING THE PEACE

The fasting question and the well-fed answer smell of a man
a crow signals food's here all clear they come for what they find read the signs
we are grown dependent on identity food for a Bosnian food for a Serb the middle hour of a minute makes our sense
His mind's a crook that bends his life things change their kindnesses a heart fails
coming near the birthday of overdetermined desire the Balkan Expectation conquers a dead village assembled around a surviving cow they listen to sermons on chastity market full of mirrors
everything is a river
And so on straw smolders under the bodyshop wall and everywhere bridges are still beautiful.

5 June 1993
The three yards of my majesty and late a war, did you?

My father and a blue knife. And a garage, white sand, her sea. The sitar analyzes this quiet room into its component silences.

In the garage a black Pontiac. On the window ledge some pensées black-eyed purple hearts with hearts of gold means soft. No, thought. Three realms, three times the in-numerable entity.

Mindsprawl, the endless kindnesses of kind.

6 June 1993
Walk by this narrow field the vulture sat to his food that spring day
another year upon

a victim earth.

To be in the process of making
I am supposing a project unwraps from my hands my concerns are peculiar in some insistence on letting the silence stretch between people to heal them of not listening to the words in their sweet fat mouths, the learning.

Learn a foreign language
it will heal anything this side of death—accountably the waves full of cod.

6 June 1993
INTERVENE IN HOSTIA

Let the rail splitter sleep deep
old Saturn keeps his chilly revel and an orange moon
refutes sterility—

we have reached
the secret passage
where the world
must heal itself

our means are empty
our ashtrays full

drumbeats
imagined in deep space
alien physics
of cold sound

and yet we hear.

6 June 1993, KTC
Days aver
mute haze
fades

Bright
happens
everywhere us.

6 June 1993, KTC
TRAVEL

for Charlotte

Somewhere
when it is Massachusetts

an offering
of the means

line-maker, fake me a lute, a color I can play on or stalwart word I whisper her sure on the shore

no matter what wind.
“You can almost smell the sea.” As if over the hill a wave of the hand had

and you, only knew, ever knew it.

7 June 1993